Physical Description

Updated

The item is a small weatherboard cottage located in Nepean Street. The building is a typical late nineteenth century vernacular rural cottage with a symmetrical front elevation and hipped sheeted roof. The external detailing however has been altered with cement tiles, new cladding and aluminium framed windows. The cottage is set within a private village subdivision of the late nineteenth century and is set close to the street. The general area of this village is low-lying land characterised by lagoons after periods of rain and this building is the only extant evidence for residential development.
